Barrow Learning Quarter

Cumbria is home to a thriving and advanced manufacturing hub, with our Barrow campus set to build on this by delivering degree programmes that are aligned with the needs of local employers, including manufacturing, cyber security and logistics.

With the increasing integration of computer technologies and automation in the workplace, there is growing demand for skilled manufacturing engineers in the region. To meet this need, academics at the University of Cumbria have worked in partnership with BAE Systems to design degree-level programmes for September 2024 entry. These courses will allow for a joined-up approach between education and industry, offering graduates exciting employment opportunities within the community.

Our Barrow campus, adjacent to the BAE Systems Submarine Skills and Knowledge site, will be positioned at the heart of the Barrow Learning Quarter. In recognition of Barrow's historic and ongoing involvement in the marine and defence industry, the building's design will echo the shape of a submarine.

COURSE TYPES

Programmes of Study

The programmes of study offered by the University at postgraduate level can be divided into four main groups.

POSTGRADUATE DIPLOMA & CERTIFICATE

Diplomas and Certificates are Level 7 qualifications that are valued at two-thirds or one-third of a traditional master's, respectively, and take less time to complete. Some courses may provide the option to top up Diplomas and Certificates to a master's level qualification at a later date.

PGCE

Want to teach your passion? Equivalent to 60 credits of a master's degree and typically lasting one year, a Postgraduate Certificate in Education (PGCE) prepares you to teach your subject in a classroom.

MASTER'S DEGREE

As a complete Level 7 qualification, studying a master's degree provides the opportunity to further explore an area of interest or take the next step towards a doctorate. Both taught and research courses will increase employability.

PHD

As the highest level of qualification, a doctorate degree offers students the opportunity to make a significant contribution to their field of study and collaborate with others to conduct and publish a piece of research.

COURSE OVERVIEW:

On this programme, you will learn all of the academic knowledge required to work in this field and, importantly, have plenty of hands-on training in our skills hub, which is equipped with the latest imaging workstations and houses one of the largest MedaPhor ultrasound simulation labs in the world.

This programme gives you exposure to the full range of sonography in clinical areas, such as obstetrics, gynaecology, general medical (abdominal and small parts), vascular, breast, and musculoskeletal ultrasound training.

Approximately 75% of your studies will be practical, so you will develop the work-based skills required to step into a job after graduation. The module delivery will be an online 'blended' learning approach and most modules will have an element of live virtual tutorial type sessions.

The ultrasound awards are currently undergoing periodic review (re-approval), and CASE re-accreditation, and some minor changes are proposed to some of the modules, starting September 2023. As this is a professional programme, all proposed changes are intended to ensure the programme remains in line with current UK standards.
